5.2. Document Delivery, Intercampus Copy, BONUS+, and Griffith Photocopies and Loans

1. Introduction and impact on collection development

It is not possible for libraries to purchase the full range of information resources published in electronic and print format on a “just in case” basis of usage. The QUT Library uses a variety of “just in time” strategies included in this guideline to provide access to information resources not selected for inclusion into the collection. The addition of these supply and delivery services supplements the immediate availability of resources in the collections. They allow the Library to purchase the most heavily in demand resources to meet most student and staff needs, and effectively borrow the less in demand resources via these alternate supply methods.
2. Document Delivery lending

Eligibility
Material is supplied to libraries only.

Material supplied and loan period
The following categories of material may be borrowed for 56 days, with no renewals:
- General
- Large books
- Musical scores
- Videos
- DVDs

Documents are supplied subject to copyright legislation, and individual licence agreements for electronic products.

Theses are copied for a standard price if the author has given permission, or requesters may be directed to QUT ePrints if there is an electronic copy available.

Material excluded
The following materials are excluded from loan:
- Reference collection material
- Course Reserve collection
- Periodicals collection material
- Rare books
- Law primary
- Loose-leaf publications

Supply of excluded material listed above may be negotiated under special circumstances.

Dispatch of materials
Loans of items are dispatched by courier or post.

Copies of documents are preferably sent electronically but will be couriered or posted if required.

Personal collection of materials must be by prior arrangement. Identification is required on collection.

Charges

Statistics
Relevant statistics are collected and reported upon.

Performance indicators
There are no specific QUT performance indicators for document delivery lending but performance standards in the Australian Interlibrary Resource Sharing (ILRS) Code are met.
3. Document Delivery borrowing

Eligibility
All requests must be for QUT research or study purposes. These requests must be for materials not held by QUT Library.

QUT staff
Academic and professional staff, gold card holders and other clients entered onto the HR system as “like staff” are eligible to use the document delivery service.

QUT postgraduate students
The following categories of students are eligible to use the document delivery service:
- PhD students
- Masters students (Research and Coursework)
- Honours students and other special groups of research students,
- Postgraduate diploma students
- Postgraduate certificate students

QUT undergraduate students
Undergraduate students require their lecturer’s authorisation on their document delivery requests.

Purchase authorisation
Where a single document delivery request is estimated to cost more than A$300, Document Delivery staff purchase the item and have it processed for the Library collection, arrangements are made for the requestor to receive it as a loan once processed.

Receipt and return of materials
The Document Delivery staff arrange all receipt and return of material borrowed from other libraries.

Number of requests
There is no limit placed by the Library on the number of document delivery requests, however, should a single client make very large numbers of requests or multiple urgent or rush requests, the Document Delivery Supervisor will consult with the Liaison Librarian for negotiation with the client.

Copyright
QUT complies with all requirements of the Copyright Act 1968, as amended.
Copyright Declarations are to be held for a period of four years in chronological order and disposed of in one year lots.

Overdue and lost material borrowed from other libraries on Interlibrary Loan
QUT Library make records of client who are overdue in returning materials borrowed from other libraries and QUT students may accumulate penalty points at QUT. QUT Library privileges are suspended for QUT Library clients who have material borrowed from other libraries overdue for more than eight days.

QUT Library clients who have lost material are required to meet all costs imposed by the borrowing institution for replacement of the material. If costs cannot be reclaimed from the client, the accounts will be sent to either the client’s School for payment, or to QUT Debt Collectors.

Statistics
Relevant statistics are collected and reported upon.

Performance Indicators
- Request processing and receipt turnaround time from the date the request is received in QUT’s Document Delivery system, to the date the item is dispatched to the client.
- Fill rate for requests.

4. BONUS+

Eligibility
All QUT staff and students are eligible to use the BONUS+ service.

Type of material supplied
BONUS+ is a service that allows all QUT students and staff to borrow books for free from participating university libraries across Australia and New Zealand. Participating libraries nominate collections to be available for loan via the BONUS+ service. Not all collection items may be available.

More information
More information on BONUS+ is available from the QUT Library web site.

5. Intercampus copy requests

Eligibility
All QUT staff and students are eligible to use the Intercampus Copy service.

Type of material supplied
Staff and postgraduate students will be provided with the URL or copies of any articles or book chapters held in QUT libraries.

Undergraduate students will be provided with copies of articles in journals that are held by QUT Libraries (including the QUT Library Store), but not held at the student’s home campus.

Dispatch
Material is forwarded directly to clients in the fastest possible way, usually electronically.

Number of requests
There is no limit placed by the Library on the number of Intercampus Copy requests.

Statistics
Relevant statistics are kept and reported upon.
